Porch Fest, a nationwide event that began in New York in 2007, is all about enjoying diverse music in a walkable community setting. This year's Humboldt Porch Fest features 50 performers across a variety of genres, including folk, hip-hop (courtesy of Hip Hop Humboldt), jam bands, experimental, and rock.

Wander from porch to porch, yard to yard, as the Sunny Brae neighborhood comes alive with music. Everything is outdoors—no need to enter any homes—and you'll know who's participating by the yard signs. Maps will be available at each location and online at playhousearts.org/porchfest, helping you plan your day and catch your favorite performers.

Neroli, the event organizer and former Murphy's Markets cashier, says, "Sunny Brae is the perfect neighborhood for this—it's all about community." And what better way to enjoy the day than with a stop at the heart of the neighborhood, Murphy's Markets, where you can grab some local goodies before heading out for more tunes!

This is a walking and biking-friendly event, so park nearby and explore the area at your own pace. Let's build community through music—see you there!

Just Flip It

Editor:

I read that Security National Properties Holding Company, LLC (SNPH), has donated over $1 million into the "Yes on F" campaign and Eureka residents have now received two fliers from SNPH addressing the issue of alleged cheaters.

Although these fliers overtly address the cheaters, their purpose is clearly also to encourage more individuals to vote yes on Measure F.

Likely, the "No on F" campaign has far fewer dollars to support its cause, so I have a suggestion on how you can show your support for the "No" cause at no cost to you or them.

Take the second yellow mailer and place it in your front window upside down with the "cheaters" side facing out. This can serve as a signal to passers-by that you support a "No" vote while avoiding the risk of sign defacement or theft.

I should add, I am not associated with the no campaign.

'Fooled'

Editor:

Who doesn't believe in the need for more affordable housing? So, when a young, personable woman knocked on my door many months ago asking me to sign a petition to convert Eureka

City Schools' vacant Jacobs site into affordable housing, I asked, "Who could possibly be opposed to the measure?" She said that the California Highway Patrol wanted to put its new Humboldt headquarters there instead. No mention of the involvement of Rob Arkley's Security National as the main instigator and founder of this misleading campaign. No mention that the measure would torpedo an Old Town affordable housing/transit hub plan already in the works and put Eureka at odds with state law mandating affordable housing.

I am one of the "nearly 3,000 voters" that Security National's minions fooled into helping put this measure on the ballot. Sorry about that. Don't be fooled. Vote no on Measure F.

Mitch Kerman, Eureka

'A Tyrant'

Editor:

Free speech is an inalienable human right that is essential for human dignity, and is protected by the First Amendment because our rights disintegrate without free speech.

Censorship is a government tool used to silence critics and to control and manipulate its population. It is a form of political violence. Tyrants use censorship.

The Biden-Harris White House began pressuring media outlets to censor speech they didn't like, starting in their first week in office. They targeted critics of government policy, experts with important information, and ordinary citizens sharing their personal experiences and observations. This censorship harmed countless individuals and society as a whole. Neither Biden nor Harris has apologized or renounced this egregious violation. Trump has been lambasted for his "dictator for a day" quip, but Harris has demonstrated that if elected, she would be a tyrant every day.

Amy Gustin, Eureka

'Inexplicable'

Editor:

The teamsters' failure to endorse the Democratic presidential candidate for the first time in memory seems inexplicable given the audio of the Republican candidate and Elon Musk laughing about Musk saying he'll fire any striking workers and the Republican candidate giggling and agreeing. I will give the same consideration to teamsters if they are striking. I would not cross any other unions picket lines, though.

John Dillon, Eureka

'No on O'

Editor:

Measure O proposes to raise the sales tax by 1 percent countywide. Eureka has a 9.25-percent sales tax, and Arcata is poised to follow. If approved, our sales tax would be 10.25 percent, on par with the highest in the U.S.

Measure Z (the 2014 half-cent increase) was promised as a solution to budget shortfalls and to increase funding for "roads and public safety." Z-funding for roads is a small percentage of the total and has dropped every year. The county chooses to fund hotel rooms for the homeless instead.

Measure O adds $24 million annually to the county budget, with no limits on how the money will be spent. If approved, there is no incentive to cut costs and use current funds efficiently.

Increasing taxes on the hard-working, tax-paying residents of an economically depressed county is not the solution to current mismanagement and reckless spending. Vote no on O!

Deborah Lynne, Eureka

Correction

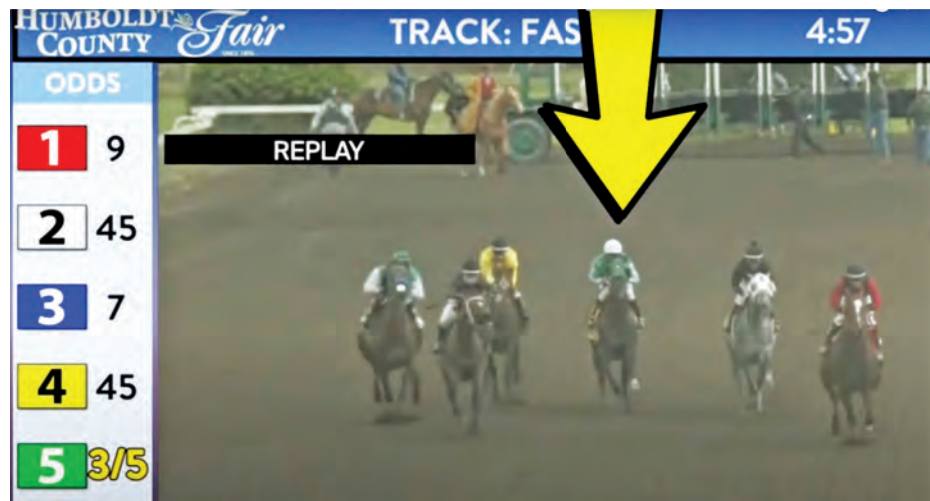

A story headlined "Bringing Balance Back" in the Sept. 19, 2024, edition of the North Coast Journal inaccurately stated the reason California Coastal Commissioner and Third District Humboldt County Supervisor Mike Wilson recused himself from a discussion and vote on an application for modifications to a permit for the Wiyot Tribe's work to restore ceremonial structures on Tuluwat Island. Wilson recused himself because he formerly worked as a manager for the project's environmental review phase. The Journal regrets the error.

HumCo Fair Sees Two Horse Racing Fatalities, Sparking Concerns

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

Two racehorses were euthanized after being injured in races at the Humboldt County Fair this year, making it one of the deadliest on record in the race meet's 128-year history.

The California Horse Racing Board (CHRB) has described the horses' deaths as "preventable," raising concerns both about the safety of a sport that has caused 60 horse fatalities statewide so far this year and the track at the Humboldt County Fairgrounds, which has reportedly seen more than its fair share. For context, the fair's meets have recorded 24 horse deaths since 1994 and the track's fatality rate is 5.5 percent higher than the national average, according to CHRB.

Arctic Fire, a 6-year-old mare owned by Sue Gilmour, trained by Jim Gilmour and ridden by Cristobal Herrera, was euthanized after sustaining a musculoskeletal injury in the fourth race on the fair meet's opening day, Aug. 23. Then the CHRB reported less than two weeks later that Visual Display, a 12-year-old quarter horse owned and trained by Juan Hernandez, and ridden by Vladimir Jensen, had been euthanized after suffering the same injury during a race Sept. 1. According to reports, both animals were put down in accordance with veterinarians' recommendations.

The fatalities were first reported by Humboldtsports.com.

Visual Display's death has drawn criticism from animal rights activists and regulators due to the horse's age, and the fact it was racing for the second time in eight days amid a comeback after seven years away from the sport.

The California Horse Racing Board spokesperson Mike Marten told Lauren Schmitt at KMUD News that the board learns by experience and works to problems it identifies.

"It's clear that older horses like Visual Display shouldn't be racing," Marten said, adding that the CHRB is now considering implementing an age limit for horses eligible to race at county fairs, which will likely be set between 8 and 10 years old.

Marten was a bit more measured in comments emailed to the Journal, saying the age limit is a "suggestion" by the board's equine medical director, Jeff Blea, but it will ultimately be up to the board commissioners to "determine the best course of action."

Marten said CHRB investigates all equine fatalities that occur within its jurisdiction, typically sending investigators and veterinary personnel to "meet with those involved with the horse, such as the trainer, owner, practicing veterinarian."

"Our goal is for everyone to understand exactly what occurred and for those caring for the horse to be aware of the factors that can lead to tragedy," Marten said. "There is no timetable for the conclusion of such investigations."

questions about whether track conditions were safe on the fair meet's opening day, which would record a record 1.19 inches of rainfall, according to the National Weather Service, though most of it came after the day's races were finished. Because data has shown wet tracks can be unsafe for horses to race on, the CHRB has an inclement weather policy that requires track superintendents to collect precipitation data regularly and ensure safe racing conditions. It's not clear exactly what the weather was at the time Arctic Fire took the starting gates for the day's fourth race, though it's apparent from video of the event some precipitation had already fallen and the weather tracking website Weatherunderground.com indicates rain began falling that day around 3 p.m., about 15 minutes before the fair's first scheduled post time of the day.

Marten said CHRB believes the Humboldt County Fair "fully complied" with the board's inclement weather policy.

Humboldt County Fair CEO Moira Kenny told the Journal via email that the fair was sad to report the two fatalities, and said both deaths are pending further investigation by the CHRB.

In a social media post about Arctic Fire's death, the advocacy group Kill Racing Not Horses posted to social media that the mare was the 52nd horse reported to have died in California races to date this year, noting the horse had raced 14 times in two years in three states, calling the death "another tragic example of the trafficking and deaths of horses for mere gambling."

"No legitimate sport would tolerate the deaths of 52 of its athletes in 32 weeks of competition in one state," the post says.

Marten said CHRB Chair Gregory Ferraro "has expressed grave concern over the unusually high rate of equine fatalities at Northern California Fairs."

"The suggestion by Dr. Blea is one example of a way to address the problem," Marten continued. "Other possible solutions could be forthcoming."

The Humboldt County Fair Association's next scheduled meeting is Sept. 30.

Rio Dell Launches Neuter and Spay Voucher Program

By Anne To

anne@northcoastjournal.com

Getting pets spayed and neutered just got a lot cheaper for Rio Dell residents, with the city partnering with a new local clinic to start a new program.

Residents of Rio Dell can now go to the city's resource center to receive vouchers based on their income and pet's needs.

Humboldt Humane and Critters Without Litters is a new clinic that opened in June, making it the only neuter and spay clinic in the county besides Humboldt Spay/Neuter Network (HSNN) in Myrtle town. Located on Fernbridge Drive in Fortuna, Humboldt Humane and Critters Without Litters offers Eel River Valley residents a closer option.

"The transportation from Rio Dell to Myrtle town twice a day is very, very prohibitive for some people," Rio Dell City Councilmember Amanda Carter says. "So having a clinic that's a little bit closer means that people can get there easier without spending all the time and the money on the gas."

Spaying or neutering dogs and cats can be expensive. Jennifer Raymond, founder of Humboldt Humane and Critters Without Litters, says it costs around $350 at most local vet clinics to spay a female cat. In comparison, at Critters without Litters, it costs $120.

Still, not everyone can afford to pay for the procedure.

"I live in a very economically impoverished area, and cost and transportation are both pretty prohibitive when it comes to spaying and neutering your pets," Carter says. "I run into a lot of people who say, 'Oh, I've got this cat that needs to get fixed, but he keeps getting out, and I can't afford to get it fixed.' We do have a couple other nonprofits that offer vouchers, but I think it's very, very important and more accessible to the community, if it's run by the city."

The city is now joining an effort to reduce the growing stray animal population occurring nationwide. An estimated 6.8 million cats and dogs entered rescues and shelters across the states in 2023, according to Shelters Animal Count.

Raymond says there is a growing problem with strays in Humboldt County.

"It has skyrocketed in the last two to three years," she says. "The number of calls that we're getting, the number of kittens. In fact, if you call any of the rescues in Humboldt County and ask about kittens, all of them are full right now."

Trudy Terres, executive director of HSNN, says she has also seen an increase in strays locally.

"There is definitely a huge issue with stray and feral pets in Humboldt County," Terres says. "Many factors have contributed to this ongoing issue that we have experienced first-hand at HSNN, including access to services in rural areas, lack of education on responsible pet ownership and financial barriers, to name a few."

While the number of animals entering the Humboldt County Animal Shelter has not increased much over the past three years, rates of owners reclaiming their pets have dropped significantly. From 2021 to 2023, dogs reclaimed by their owners at the Humboldt Animal Shelter have dropped from 56 percent to 43 percent, according to Shelter Manager Andre Hale.

For cats, the number of reclamations has always been low, consistently falling below 10 percent, Hale says.

However, while the number of re-claimed pets at the shelter has dropped, adoption numbers at Humboldt County Animal Shelter have increased about 15 percent for cats and 17 percent for dogs over the past year.

Raymond says some local farms that used to have guard dogs and cats for pest control have left them behind with the recent economic turmoil.

"Mostly it's for cats, but there are a number of dogs that do turn up with the cats," Raymond says. "We generally don't hear about it until they've been breeding for a while, and neighbors notice them coming to their property looking for food. By the time we go in there will be 20 to 40 cats."

Rio Dell is one of the first cities in the county to launch a program to help residents pay for spaying and neutering their pets.

"I'm hoping other cities and the county follow suit and start their own voucher programs instead of continuing to overcrowd animal shelters," Carter says. "Access to low-cost spay and neuter services is really the only way to help with overcrowded animal shelters in the long term. My hope, and the hope of the rest of the city council and staff, is that Rio Dell becomes an example of how to achieve a long-term solution."

The program currently has a budget of $3,500, funded through a portion of animal licensing fees in the city, though Carter says the city is looking to increase funding through grants and donations, as well.

After a Years-long Spike, Humboldt's Overdose Deaths Seeing Sharp Drop

Following a nationwide trend, overdose deaths appear to have declined sharply in Humboldt County in the first months of 2024 after increasing sharply in recent years since fentanyl became pervasive.

Surveys compiled by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention show a 10.6-percent decline in fatal overdoses nationwide, with some experts predicting the decline will be even larger once data is finalized.

"In the states that have the most rapid data collection systems, we're seeing declines of 20 percent, 30 percent," Nabarun Dasgupta, an expert on street drugs at the University of North Carolina, told NPR.

In Humboldt County, which didn't record its first fentanyl related overdose death until 2016, several years after the highly potent synthetic drug came to define what officials warned was the third wave of a national opioid epidemic in 2013, fentanyl overdose fatalities were down as much as 30 percent through April based on preliminary data, according to Humboldt County Health Officer Candy Stockton.

The county also appears to be seeing fewer opioid overdose-related hospitalizations, as St. Joseph Hospital spokesperson Christian Hill said the emergency room has seen 62 visits so far this year compared to 118 over the same period in 2023.

Stockton said the decrease may seem like a "sudden change" but is actually the product of a decades-long effort on multiple fronts to reduce overdose fatalities. Nonetheless, it represents some rare good news in the effort to prevent drug overdose deaths locally, where rates have historically been some of the highest in the state.

Since it started showing up in the early 2010s, fentanyl quickly began accounting for a majority of the nation's overdose deaths, because it's highly potent and cheap, a dangerous combination that saw dealers and manufacturers quickly begin adding it to everything from counterfeit prescriptions to other street drugs. Because it's 100 times stronger than heroin, even a tiny amount can cause a deadly reaction. That's particularly true of users who haven't built up an opioid tolerance, making it an especially dangerous addition to counterfeit non-opiate prescription pills like benzodiazepines (like Valium and Xanax) and stimulants (like Adderall and Ritalin).

In Humboldt County, none of the 43 overdose deaths reported by the coroner's office in 2015 tested positive for even a trace of fentanyl. That changed in 2016, when the county found the drug in toxicology results from a single overdose case. The following two years also each saw a single fentanyl-related overdose death in Humboldt. Seemingly overnight, in 2017, that number exploded to 46, quickly making fentanyl the deadliest drug in the county.

Officials warned it was cutting across all demographics — cocaine using party-goers, teens ingesting prescription pills, heroin users and folks who'd developed dependencies on prescription pain pills were all starting to die of overdoses with toxicology reports later coming back positive for fentanyl.

According to the Humboldt County Coroner's Office, fentanyl accounted for 65 of the county's 76 overdose deaths in 2022 and 60 of 69 in 2023. But those numbers seemed to fall off sharply at the start of this year, the office reported, with nine fentanyl overdose deaths confirmed through the first three months of 2024. If that trend holds, it would represent a 40-percent decrease over last year, and a 45-percent decrease from 2022.

Stockton cautioned it's impossible to predict whether the current decline may change over the remainder of the year, also noting that toxicology tests can take up to 10 weeks to confirm, creating an inherent lag between a death and when it is recorded.

"Our data is always at least three months old," she said.

But there's reason to believe this is not a fluke, she said.

"From our review of deaths in 2022 and 2023, we know that most deaths are occurring in people who have a history of substance use, and that very few people are dying while they are being prescribed medications to treat substance use disorder," she said, adding that access to effective medication treatment for substance use disorder has increased. "We also know that naloxone is widely distributed in Humboldt County, and we know of hundreds of reported overdose reversals."

Naloxone — also commonly referred to by the brand name Narcan — is indeed now much more widely distributed locally than even a year ago, now commonly carried by not only police officers, firefighters and EMTs but also librarians, school staff, some residents and, perhaps most importantly, substance users and their cohorts. Additionally, Stockton pointed out, fentanyl test strips have become much more common, allowing users to know whether the drug is present in whatever they are ingesting.

Ethan Makulec, the executive director of the Humboldt Area Center for Harm Reduction (HACHR), a nonprofit dedicated to improving the health and wellness of people who use drugs, said the numbers also tell a different story.

According to Makulec, HACHR's internal data indicates an average of 64 overdoses were reversed monthly in 2023 with naloxone among people reached by HACHR's services, compared with 82 per month in 2024. This would seem to indicate that overdoses are not becoming less frequent, just less deadly with the increased distribution of naloxone. (Makulec said the organization went from distributing about 1,300 doses of naloxone a month in 2023 to more than 1,600 monthly this year.)

"An increase in reported reversals, while demonstrating an increased number of lives saved from overdose, does also indicate an increased risk and frequency of overdose, likely due to the increased risk of overdose from substances like fentanyl occurring in the drug supply, and also caused by the severity of hardships and barriers to care faced by people who use drugs," Makulec said.

Makulec also pointed out that it's harm reduction organizations statewide that have carried the bulk of efforts to distribute naloxone, noting that they are responsible for 59 percent of overdose reversals. In Humboldt County, Makulec said HACHR has distributed 37 percent of the naloxone units, according to the California Department of Public Health, more than any other organization, resulting in 43 percent of the county's reported overdose reversals.

Makulec says HACHR accepts donations and has volunteer opportunities for folks looking to help out. But he says the organization also appreciates public advocacy on its behalf, noting its harm reduction work in Eureka currently faces "severe restrictions" that limit its service sites and times, preventing it "from providing sufficient resources for the number of people in Eureka who are in need." (For more information, he invites the public to comment HACHR at admin@hachr707.org.)

Stockton, for her part, also said educational programs on practices that can reduce risk — like using those fentanyl test strips and never using alone — have also made an impact.

"A lot of people are saying this is a 'sudden change,' and it is true that seeing this change in outcomes is a sudden change in the numbers," she said. "The work behind that change has been an ongoing commitment to over a decade of work by medical providers, treatment programs and harm reeducation groups, law enforcement and the criminal justice system, hospitals, schools and community groups that have all worked incredibly hard to implement the changes necessary to save lives in Humboldt County."

"We should be proud of the progress we've made," Stockton continued, "and it's important that we stay committed to that work, because too many of our friends, family and community members are still dying from overdose."

North Country Fair Turns 50

By Mark Larson and Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

A new generation of young dancers followed in the Samba Parade with Samba da Alegria and Samba do Mar on Sunday.

Under bright, sunny skies, the North Country Fair, an Arcata tradition created by the Same Old People organizers in 1974, featured the All Species Parade on Saturday and the Samba Parade with Samba da Alegria and Samba do Mar on Sunday. This year's party featured 175 art and craft vendors, interactive toys and playgrounds for children and adults, local food booths and three stages of music and entertainment running continuously both days.

Jerry Martien, director emeritus of the Same Old People, walked around the crowded plaza. He shared the message on the original poster: "We believe the basis of our life and economy is cooperation and mutual aid." Today's fair poster by the Same Old People, includes an expanded message that includes social and environmental justice: "We celebrate and advocate for a healthy environment, cooperation and community, a vibrant alternative economy, and justice for every person and all forms of life." The most visible manifestation of that environmental message today were the fair's reusable 50th anniversary Klean Canteen cups available for purchase and Zero-Waste volunteers sorting the waste into recycling, composting and trash bins.

"It's always been very political. It's about cooperation as opposed to competition," says Martien. "Even though its original base was a group of community businesses, the idea of having a storefront was one of community service." The Same Old People — named for the core group of organizers, business owners and activists who kept showing up to plan events and actions — came to the idea for the festival at an unlikely moment, on the heels of losing the fight against splitting Arcata with U.S. Highway 101. Martien says as they gathered in defeat and wondered what to do next, "Probably the looniest person among us said, 'We should give the town a party!'"

The All Species Parade, now shepherded by the Arcata Playhouse, was originally the province of the Northcoast Environmental Center. Executive Director Caroline Griffith says the parade and the All Species Day Proclamation serve "to remind us that we share this planet, we don't own it ... as a reminder of our space in the scheme of things, that we're one of many species."

The organization maintains its presence in the event, participating in last year's street performance of tearing down the Klamath dams. This year, NEC cleanups provided materials for the giant turtle sculpture built by homeless and housing insecure people at Our Space Arts, run by Playhouse Arts.

Executive/Artistic Director of the Arcata Playhouse Jackie Dandeneau says the All Species Parade is a natural fit for the theater and its programs. "We do outdoor spectacle," she says, adding the theaters is brimming with giant puppets, fish hats and the like, "and artists on staff that are like, 'Yeah, let's go!'"

This year's Samba Parade was the 38th to rumble and shake its way around the plaza. It grew out of the All Species Parade, in which Sam Camp and other musicians used to play samba music. In 1986, David Peñalosa, Humboldt's godfather of samba percussion, led a stand-alone Samba Parade and two years later, Ann Youmans brought a troupe of samba dancers.

Maria Vanderhorst, artistic director of Samba do Mar Humboldt, which co-produced the parade with Samba da Alegria, says, "The parade has just really grown." This year, some 68 adult and 25 youth dancers performed to the music of Samba da Alegria's 44 drummers, singers and musicians. The tribute to Brazilian culture takes enormous planning and preparation. On the dance side alone, planning and costume design began in late May, and weekly classes started in July, ramping up to twice weekly classes as the fair drew closer. Vanderhorst, who danced alongside her 9-year-old daughter this year, says it's worth the time and effort. In practice as well as the big performance, she says, "We really get to connect to our community."

"It is still a chance for the community to see itself," says Martien, who sees mostly discord and danger in the news of late, and people being told to fear their neighbors. The North Country Fair, he says, is for coming together. "It's a healthy dose of community that we all need."

A Trio of Arcata Soft Openings

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

Chef Gori Igarashi wears a tall ballcap with a cannabis leaf embroidered on it and a thin towel tied around his neck as he hunches over a burner, tossing fried rice in a wok. A pair of men pinball between stations in Susukino Ramen Bar's (1504 G St., Arcata) open kitchen, ladling out broth, checking the fryer and reading orders from a wall-mounted touchscreen. To the side, a server runs her finger along paper tickets, hunting for an order that hasn't gone out yet and double checking the rest.

It's the second night of Susukino's soft opening but it's not particularly soft — the house is packed, and more customers are milling by the door. At the counter, a diner raves over his bowl of noodles and offers encouragement: "You guys are getting slammed but you're doing a great job."

Three new Arcata restaurants have had soft openings this month: Susukino Ramen Bar, Venecia and Havana. Among them are first timers in the restaurant business and old hands taking up legacy locations. The three are entering the dining scene at varying speeds as they test out recipes and workflow in the kitchens and front of house.

Ronuk Patel and his cousin Roshan Patel had been partners in Devi Cannabis, but wanted to move out of the struggling industry. Once settled on the idea of a ramen restaurant, they reached out to friends they'd made on visits to Sapporo, including Igarashi, who'd been cooking in ramen shops for a decade, though they'd not yet tried his noodles. Up for the venture and move overseas, Igarashi took them on a whirlwind tour of ramen shops to learn what they'd need to set up in Arcata.

Igarashi, whose signature noodles include spicy sesame tan-tan ramen and a vinegar spiked soup, is adjusting to cooking in the U.S., where ramen restaurants are expected to offer a wider variety, including a vegetarian option, rather than one house specialty. And unlike his own shop in Hokkaido, where he worked solo, he's communicating with a staff of people in the kitchen and on the floor. He says, "It's more fun," and despite the language barrier, they've been able to communicate well enough, and he's confident they'll work out the kinks of opening week.

Gaurav Mehta, the third partner in the business, has experience in the local restaurant industry but the Patels are learning as they go, so the week-long soft opening has involved a steep learning curve, particularly managing the flow and communication from the back of house to servers. Hiring experienced servers has been a big help, says Ronuk Patel, as has the patience of those staffers. He says he's told them, "Hey we really don't know what we're doing ... just bear with us and we can figure all this out."

Feedback, says Ronuk Patel, has been mostly positive and the critiques generally fair. There's been some frustration over the reservation system and while most people say they love the noodles, trouble with a boiler the first night gives credence to an online complaint about undercooking. The pork belly "wasn't up to what I wanted to be" that night either, he says, but "we fixed that for sure." The happy humming from a couple at the counter seems testament to the improvement.

Now fully open, this weekend Susukino will test out late-nights hours and DJ music. It's a gamble this far from the nightlife hub of the plaza and he says the team is going to watch the traffic and adjust accordingly. "I think people will show up, but you don't really know."

Over in the former home of Mazzotti's, chef Woody Cabello-Penn is helming the kitchen at Venecia (773 Eighth St., Arcata) with familiar faces, as a number of kitchen staff and servers came along with him from the recently shuttered Tavern 1888. "That's the only way I could have gotten it open, because half the team had been together beforehand," he says.

None of the former restaurants' recipes are on the comparatively brief menu of Venecia, which is owned by Jack Wu, of Jack's Seafood and Ginger. "I just tried to keep it simple and keep all of my local purveyors," says Cabello-Penn. "It's classic Italian American-style food but I try to keep a little taste of Humboldt in there as well," as exemplified by the Ferndale lamb in the Bolognese sauce. "I feel like it's a lot better to have a small, well-executed menu than to have a ton of items and not be able to do it too well."

A Cuban sandwich ready for pickup at Havana's Sept. 19 pop-up.

"I don't know how long we can call it a soft opening; I think it's open now," says Cabello-Penn of the weeks since the first service on Sept. 9. The gradual approach has its advantages, though. "We want to fix any issues with the food or the service before we have a line out the door," he says, "let people trickle in." He's already made adjustments to the menu, like letting the lasagna go after finding the pizza oven unsatisfactory for the task. Customer feedback has been helpful, too. "The first couple weeks, I didn't have gluten-free pasta and now I do. It's actually been more popular than expected."

Experimental breakfast hours have been abandoned for a couple brunchy items and opening at 11 a.m. The lunch and dinner offerings are fairly solidified now, but Cabello-Penn says, "I'm always trying new stuff, and the menu will eventually change."

The transition from the Plaza Grill to its replacement Havana (780 Seventh St., Arcata), a Cuban-Californian fusion restaurant, follows a less conventional path. Along with Havana's dishes showing up as specials on the Plaza Grill menu during the 35-year-old restaurant's final month, on Sept. 19, Havana held a pop-up night that was packed with nostalgic Plaza regulars and patrons eager to sample what's coming ahead of the official Oct. 16 opening.

Co-owner Shona Baum is pleased with the turnout. "We basically sold out of almost all our food but ... at the end of the night," and she was happy to see so many empty plates with little evidence of their plantains and ropa vieja stew left. That members of salsa groups showed up to dance was pleasing, too, she says. "We really want it to be a community space."

"The number of details ... that need to be attended to in order to do a good job and getting feedback from the community is super important," says Baum. Some of the Plaza Grill staff is staying on, which should make the changeover a bit smoother, and the "Cuba contingent" from the original restaurant in Arcata. Plaza Grill's split kitchen — a larger space in back and a smaller one with a pass-through to the dining room — requires adjustments in workflow, too, to get dishes out faster.

The slow rollout of the food, Baum says, is helping the staff familiarize themselves with the new menu, as well as gauge local response to the dishes. Burgers and steaks may remain options since, she says, "It's a fusion restaurant." She says she appreciated Plaza Grill owner Bill Chino's advice to ask patrons what could be improved, rather than asking how they liked everything, as most people will rave aloud and keep critiques to themselves. They've already gotten some useful feedback from people who felt it was too loud, now that the carpet has been removed in favor of the redwood floor. Baum is on the hunt for solutions to make the room a little quieter.

"I feel like fundamentally, people will be voting with their feet and on social media," says Baum, who'll be paying attention for both. ●

NCRT's Sweeney Todd Stays Sharp

By Tiggerbouncer Custodio
frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

Sometimes the uncanny ability that live theater has to evoke jouissance is more a product of the audience than the production. On the night I attended North Coast Repertory Theatre's Sweeney Todd at the 5th and D Street Theatre, people clutching flowers waiting to reward months of their friend's commitment to the show, new-to-theater locals amazed at their coworker's talent, and a proud mother who drove from Santa Barbara to see her son's work all reconciled my longing for support that theater remedies. The experience, directed by Nannette Voss and Isabel Semlar, feels like Christmas; everyone involved in this production labored to find the perfect gift and presents it with love. It is visually stunning, musically brilliant, expertly acted and sinisterly murderous.

After 15 years of imprisonment, Sweeney Todd (Alex Benn) returns to London for vengeance from Beadle (Rigel Schmidt) and Judge Turpin (Joe Cherry), who took Sweeney's daughter Johanna (Marina Benson) as his ward with plans to wed her. Todd lures people into his barber chair, where he slices their throats and donates their bodies to Mrs. Lovett (Aundrea Zvaleko), who grinds them up to serve in her meat pies. The morbidity of the plot juxtaposes with composer Steven Sondheim's hauntingly beautiful melodies creates joyful dissonance and soothing tension.

I cannot praise Spike Foster's lighting design enough. The production is stunningly gorgeous from preshow to curtain-call with texture, motion and perfect balance. It allows the details of the set design (by Calder Johnson) to reveal its details. Though I would love to see the interior design, like the oven and chute, finished, and a better masking of specials on the platform, the impressive lighting forgives all shortcomings. Taylor Depew's costume design is equally impressive with its attention to detail; intentional rips and patches, as well as Johanna's stunning dress, add character throughout.

With a nearly three hour run time, the cast and musicians must maintain drive. While the music does have the dynamics needed to sustain interest, it is not enough. Urgency and the actors' constant fight for their characters' objectives must be prioritized to bring this production to the next level. Still, it is a rare treat to see every single person in this cast rise to Sondheim's challenging work and perform at such a high level. Justin Ross, Avery Alexander, Jeremy Cotton, Amber Grimes, Luke Hernandez and Gina Piazza also deserve huge praise for giving the music its own life. Musical and stage director Voss could focus on the pace of the few non-musical scenes and tempo of songs (particularly in the second-act ensembles), speed up transitions and continue the exceptional movement work of Shawn Wagner past a song's end and into the following scenes to shave time. Even still, her eye for cohesion and maintaining the writer's intent proves that she is one of the best directors in the county.

Standouts are Holly Portman's Beggar Woman and Filip Ambroski's Pirelli, who both incorporate full bawdy movement, exceptional character work, and stunning vocal dynamics to steal the show. Benson is a true triple-threat, Broadway-level performer. River Keller's Anthony is simple and sweet in the best ways. Schmitt's physicality and commitment to character add much needed levity to the piece, though it rides the line of caricature. Zvaleko is exceptional, though her dialect inconsistencies can rob her lines of clarity. Benn is powerful and I would love to see choices in physicality reflect that. Megan Sharrard comes alive in the second act with terrific acting and a stunning song. Cherry's consistent punching of words in his line readings become a bit distracting but is outweighed by his command of space.

A special thanks to Miss Maija, the friendly stranger who sat next to me and has never missed her son's opening nights. The pride in her eyes reminded me that transformative theater magic manifests through community, begets excellence and ensures the cyclical exchange of energy between cast and house. I recommend solidifying your place in that dynamic and getting your tickets early.

NCRT's Sweeney Todd continues Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m., with a masked matinee Sept. 28, through Oct. 20. Visit ncrt.net. ●

Wardance

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

This week's title song comes from the debut album of one of my favorite bands as a kiddo, Killing Joke, so don't come to me about the spelling. Welcome to autumn, and also football season, our national performative war dance ritual, other than our too-long election cycles. I'm not going to spiral about the actual wars we are at this very moment helping expand, but I do want to share a sorta famous bit from Thomas Pynchon's Gravity's Rainbow, a novel written from inside the skin of the deep machine running the death cult of our state:

"Don't forget the real business of war is buying and selling. The murdering and violence are self-policing, and can be entrusted to non-professionals. The mass nature of wartime death is useful in many ways. It serves as spectacle, as diversion from the real movements of the war. It provides raw material to be recorded into History, so that children may be taught History as sequences of violence, battle after battle, and be more prepared for the adult world. Best of all, mass death's a stimulus to just ordinary folks, little fellows, to try 'n' grab a piece of that Pie while they're still here to gobble it up. The true war is a celebration of markets."

That last line really says it all, screaming through the decades since the novel's 1973 publication, a piece of prophecy expanding outward from its main setting around World War II back to our origins and forward to our extinction like a V-2 rocket hitting our central humanity, loaded with THE nuclear A-bomb.

Changes are coming. Let's hope they're mostly seasonal around here, and massively redemptive elsewhere.

Enjoy the colors.

Thursday

A cool, early-hour experimental music night is happening at the Miniplex at 6 p.m. Australian/Los Angeles duo Stevie Richards and Mike Meanstreetz bring the traveling sound to the stage, where they will be supported by two local acts, synth-popping maestros Elegant Humanoid and sound-blaster, tone bender IDYL. $5-$10 sliding scale, and if you stick around after, there will be karaoke.

Bobby Alu plays the Arcata Playhouse at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 26.

Submitted

An hour later, the Arcata Playhouse is the place to be if you are in the mood for a different sort of sound from Australia.

Bobby Alu is a multi-instrumentalist who has devised his own style of island soul music, drawing heavily from roots reggae and laid-back folk traditions. ($23, $21 Playhouse members).

Friday

The mighty Zepparella is back in town, hosted, once again, at Humbrews, a good venue for this act. What is this act exactly? It's pretty simple, really. An all-female Led Zeppelin tribute band, focusing on a lot of the power of the erstwhile band's bombastic sound which has more or less ruled the world of rock since its heyday in the 1970s. If you are one of the band's many fans, come see what sorcery this quartet can cook up in its honor. 8 p.m. ($30, $25 advance).

Saturday

Two ensemble shows, each at roughly the same time, and within walking distance of each other. First up at 7:30 p.m. at the Outer Space, talented rock duo Silver and Nails will be joined by "adult contemporary soft metal" act Throw me the Whip, which I can only assume is a reference to the Raiders of the Lost Ark, as well as one man star cowboy act Mister Moonbeam doing T. Rex covers. ($5-$20 sliding scale).

Over at the Basement at 8 p.m., Greensboro, South Carolina's spoken wordster Moody Black will be performing, along with a coterie of fantastic local talent in the rap and hip hop scene, including Emani Eternal (on a return swing after moving away last year), Kemistree, ruffIAN & Beige Radio, Zera Starchild and more, along with grooves by DJ Pressure and live painting by Jullia Finkelstein. Quite a night of rhymin' in time for only $10.

Sunday

It's the 21st anniversary of the formation of Portland's premier marching band MarchFourth and over years of high energy shows and steady touring, this now 15-person line-up has forever minted its legacy as the dance show to go to as though the circus is in town. They'll be spiking up the tent, so to speak, at Humbrews tonight at 8 p.m., and if you haven't seen the show yet, you're in for the treat. If you already know, I'll stop jabbering. ($30, $25 advance).

Monday

Though many things have changed since the height of COVID, some things have come trickling back, often with a new paint job to complement rather than cover up the old familiar faces and feelings. One such joint is the Ocean Grove just north of Trinidad, where I am happy to say, not only have the doors been re-opened for a while but Dancehall Mondays are back in swing, with DJ Chuck on the ones and twos. Expect roots reggae, hip hop, afrobeat and everything in between. The wax starts spinning at 10 p.m. and $10 gets you inside the joint.

Tuesday

Four-plus decades since its formation and one name change that is the antithesis of the original, San Francisco's Lazy Giants has a sound that hits a lot of the right spots for me. Martial drums over moody, melodic bass lines and space-punk guitar sounds with a great vocal mix up in front of the fray, this group has found the melting point for a lot of different genres and made a beautiful thing in the process. The Disheveled opens. Doors at 8 p.m., tickets go for $15 ($12 advance), and it's also Taco Tuesday at the bar, which is a definite win. At the Miniplex.

Wednesday

I'll make this short and sweet. A film that created a confusion of feelings inside me when I first saw it as a kid is kicking off the horror season and playing at the Arcata Theatre Lounge tonight. I'm talking about Brian De Palma's 1976 Stephen King adaptation Carrie, a movie that ignited in me a youthful desire to seek revenge via telekinesis, as well as an unnatural attraction to a young Sissy Spacek, even — or perhaps especially — when covered in her bully-poured veil of blood. Everything goes wrong for our poor heroine but there are no flaws in the flick itself, just a perfect tension knot of wounded teenager outsidersness. Tickets are $6, $10 with a poster, there's a pre-show raffle, and the show usually starts around 7 p.m. Remember to get there early enough to find good seats or they're all gonna laugh at you.●

Collin Yeo (he/him) is in awe of a species capable of engineering its own extinction through optimism and motivated thinking. He is a member of that species, and unable to break the Fourth Wall. Yet.

Never Let Go's Tenuous Bonds

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

NEVER LET GO. Let me begin by opening myself up to scorn and ridicule: We need to give Halle Berry another crack at the role of Catwoman. Her action work in John Wick: Chapter 3 – Parabellum (2019) and Bruised (2020), in which her fighting chops (in her damn 50s) were equaled by her portrayal of a ferociously broken woman, are enough evidence she can redeem one of the most widely scorned comic book adaptations of all time. DC can keep cranking out grim antihero movie after movie, but maybe we let Joaquin Phoenix eat something while the rest of us enjoy an older, more complex Catwoman pouncing around Gotham and pulling off heists in a far better costume than they gave her in 2004? Think it over and come back to me when you realize I'm right.

A more readily available example of Berry's range and talents is the Spooky Season opener Never Let Go. An immersive, tense and deceptively straightforward horror movie, it establishes the clearest of roles and rules, then allows us to see how tenuous the stability and security of those things are.

There is precious little rest to be had in Never Let Go, which sends us ghostly apparitions almost as soon as we set foot in the lush, dark woods a mother and her young boys, Samuel (Anthony B. Jenkins) and Nolan (Percy Daggs IV), hunt and forage, each with a rope tied around their waist, tethering them to the old house they share. The ropes, Momma has taught them, keep them connected to the house's protective powers, guarding them from the touch of the Evil outside. They follow rituals of prayer to the house for protection, purifying themselves in a locked crawlspace at its heart and chanting promises to keep hold of their ropes each time they dare step off the porch. Theirs is the last refuge from the Evil, which has destroyed the rest of the world from which they are isolated, turning people against one another and making them kill each other. Fair enough. But when one of the boys accidentally slips his rope in a fall and isn't immediately possessed by

alive and following the rules, while haunted by terrors disguised as loved ones.

Directed by horror veteran Alexandre Aja (2003 rural slasher High Tension and 2019's swampy gator horror Crawl), the scares are real, even if we're unsure what else is. The forked black tongue twisting from a pale, bloated face is at once otherworldly and of a piece with a rundown greenhouse or a rotting log. The camera scans slowly around the wood, every shadow and leaf suspect to imagination, sudden nightmare images popping up in the calm and odd, domestic artifacts cropping up among the roots and bark. That's the visual part, anyway. The script leaves the characters and the audience — everyone but Momma — room enough for doubt that we don't know what to hope for. Escape to find other people? Stay on the porch? Stop pulling the rope so damn hard?

That Berry moves so beautifully between panic, rage and beatific love should not surprise us, but it's a rare and wonderful thing to see such range in a horror movie, where too often effects and build-up take up all the space. In giving Momma room to feel everything from violent fear of her own child to dreamily swaying along to a record with her boys, Berry and Aja give her dimension. Even when there's nary a monster in sight, it's Berry's expressions that turn the world around them into something to fear.

Likewise, Daggs and Jenkins (from whose eyes I kept seeing the ghost of Michael K. Williams) are remarkable, embodying fully formed characters, the likes of which seldom show up on screen. As they vacillate between doubt and faith, resentment and love, their turmoil is as gripping as any grown character's and their ability to carry the film's last act is astonishing.

There's much to be mined in the themes of family, the terror of letting go of each other, as we all must do eventually, and love (rather than good) as the true enemy of evil. None of it is easily delineated — we must work our way through it like these characters, hoping more than knowing. R. 101M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK. ●

The Cost of Loneliness

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

"Our [Stone Age] brains evolved to prioritize togetherness, and conversely to generate an anxiety response when we failed to find it." — Matthew Shaer, The New York Times Magazine, Sept. 1, 2024

Two years ago, the Journal of the American Heart Association published a study 40 years in the making that quantified the mental and physical costs of loneliness. Among its findings, those who experience chronic loneliness have about a 30 percent increased risk of heart attack or stroke, equivalent to smoking 15 cigarettes a day. Makes sense. We're gregarious animals. Way back when, community meant safety; loners got eaten, while those living in tribal communities ate. (A solitary hunter was no match for a saber-tooth tiger, while a group could take down a mammoth.) Right up to the Industrial Revolution, our forebears lived, for the most part, where they were born, hung out with the same family and friends from birth to death and, according to historians who study old journals and letters, welcomed the rare opportunity for solitude "as good as a spa day," as one writer put it.

Around 1800, our ancestors began moving away from the family home into anonymous cities, often across oceans, far from their roots. Communities disintegrated and loneliness — which up until then was barely known or acknowledged — became a fact of life. Not for everyone, and not necessarily debilitating, since most found innovative ways of creating communities, natural gregariousness adapting to the new realities. But newly forged bonds kept being interrupted by pandemics, wars, the Depression and, more recently, telecommuting, smartphones and extreme polarization (political, economic, racial, religious). All have taken their toll on previously tight-knit communities, neighborhoods and even churches. Consider for instance:

- Between 1950 and today, one-person households have tripled, now accounting for 29 percent of the total;
- Most people today meet their future spouses on the internet;

- Church membership (a prime way of building community, irrespective of religious belief) is way down, from over 70 percent 50 years ago to less than 50 percent now;
 - Working from home, which pre-COVID-19 accounted for 5 percent of all workdays, has tripled.
- The net result is that loneliness is on the rise. Not just the odd twinge when we're not invited to a friend's wedding, but chronic, debilitating, paralyzing capital-L, Loneliness. It's morphed in the last few years, from an uncomfortable emotional state to a full-blown epidemic. Surveys show that over 60 percent of us report feeling lonely on a regular basis, and not just older people living on their own, either. The loneliest age group consists of young adults between the ages of 18 and 25 — one in three of them, according to a recent Harvard and Making Caring Common survey.
- How bad are the consequences? The American Medical Association reported that chronic loneliness results in a 29 percent increased risk of heart disease and a 32 percent risk of stroke. Other health problems include Type 2 diabetes, depression and anxiety, suicidality and self-harm, dementia — the works. If you're lonely, chances are you'll die sooner and sicker. Two countries, the UK and Japan, consider the problem so severe that they've created ministers of loneliness.

Chances are, our species will adapt to the new conditions and challenges, as it's had to do so often and so well in the past. Hopefully, online communities, Zoom calls, get-together opportunities like weekly farmers markets, meaningful "warm ties" (regular connections we have with baristas, grocery check-out clerks, neighbors and such), all these and more will compensate for the current realities of loosening bonds. They'd better or we can kiss our communal asses goodbye.

Barry Evans (he/him, barryevans9@yahoo.com) considers coming to welcoming Eureka the best move of his life.

Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about Trustee Sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call Auction.com at 800.280.2832 for information regarding the Trustee's Sale or visit the Internet Website address www.Auction.com for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, CA09000139-24-1. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Notice to Tenant NOTICE TO TENANT FOR FORECLOSURES AFTER JANUARY 1, 2021 You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 800.280.2832, or visit this internet website www.Auction.com, using the file number assigned to this case CA09000139-24-1 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. CITY OF FORTUNA
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Fortuna Planning Commission will review and provide comments on the draft Mill District Specific Plan (MDSP) and Mill District Specific Plan Supplemental Environmental Impact Report (SEIR) on Tuesday, September 24, 2024, at 3:00 p.m. or as soon as possible thereafter. The meeting will be held at 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California, in the City Hall Council Chamber.

The MDSP governs approximately 150 City acres, including the former PALCO mill site, off-site improvement areas, and other General Plan land use change areas. The MDSP envisions the project area as an essential and diverse center for local and regional economic, employment, tourism, and residential growth and development. Proposed allowable MDSP land uses will include residential, mixed-use, flex space, transportation, distribution, commercial, restaurant, civic, lodging, manufacturing, warehousing, office, and industrial activities. The SEIR is a California Environmental Quality Act requirement that evaluates whether the proposed MDSP and General Plan amendments will result in new significant impacts or increased severity of the significant impacts previously identified during the City's General Plan adoption.

The draft MDSP and SEIR are available on the City's website at www.friendlyfortuna.com, and a physical copy is available for review at City Hall.

Interested parties may provide oral or written testimony at or before the meeting. Written comments should be sent to Planning Commission Secretary Katey Schmidt at kschmidt@ci.fortuna.ca.us or 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California, 95540 by Monday, September 23, 2024 to be presented at the meeting. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF
GARY COONROD
CASE NO. PR2400256

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of GARY COONROD
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner GARRETT COONROD
In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt.

The petition for probate requests that GARRETT COONROD be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on October 24, 2024 at 10:30 a.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4

For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit <https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/>

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Lee Earnest Astorino

November 25, 1947 – August 3, 2024

Lee Earnest Astorino peacefully passed away on August 3, 2024, surrounded by dear friends whom he cherished as family, following a brief illness. His departure has left an irreplaceable void in the hearts of those who were fortunate enough to know him.

Born on November 25, 1947, in Manhattan Beach, California, Lee was the younger of two children. From his earliest days, he had a natural charisma that drew people to him, and he cherished every friendship he formed. Lee had an incredible gift of remembering those who crossed his path, always greeting them with warmth and kindness. A man of profound moral integrity, his heart was as clear and generous as it was steadfast.

Lee spent his early years in the sunshine of Manhattan Beach, raised in a loving home by parents who were both educators. During his high school years at Mira Costa High School, Lee immersed himself in drama and choir, two passions that remained central to his life. After graduation, Lee proudly served his country in the Marine Corps, completing a tour of duty in the Vietnam War.

His love for the theater never wavered, and it was while volunteering at a local playhouse that Lee's life changed forever. At a pre-show cocktail party, he met Robert, the man who would become the love of his life. Together, they shared a love story filled with devotion, joy, and laughter that spanned decades.

In 1986, Lee, Robert, and their two beloved dogs, Killer and Princess, moved to their "temporary" home in Eureka while planning to build their dream house. Although that house never came to be, they created something far greater—a home filled with love, friendship, and lasting memories.

Lee's diverse talents and interests were reflected in his life. He loved cars, co-owned an appliance store with his brother, and ran his own gardening service. Anyone lucky enough to attend one of his tea parties could witness his passion for gardening firsthand. He loved taking long walks, working out in his home gym, and playing Pinochle. Lee and Robert's annual Christmas Open House was a hallmark of their life together, with elaborate decorations and joyful celebrations for over a decade.

Around 1993, Lee began working at Etter's Victorian Glass, specializing in picture framing. For approximately 22 years, he worked alongside Bill Etter, enjoying every moment of crafting art for his community.

After Bill's passing, Lee purchased the frame shop and continued to nurture its legacy until his last days.

A man of deep commitment to his loved ones, Lee experienced one of his happiest moments on October 13, 2013, when he and Robert exchanged vows in front of their closest friends—a day that will forever remain etched in their hearts.

Beyond his personal passions, Lee was devoted to his community. He was actively involved in the Masonic fraternity and proudly served as Master of Ferndale Lodge #193 F&AM. He held many offices in the Order of the Eastern Star, serving as Worthy Patron in both Ferndale Chapter #23 and Camellia-Star #63. Lee also belonged to the Northern Valley of Scottish Rite Masons, was a dedicated leader in the Order of the DeMolay, and served as Rainbow Dad in Humboldt Assembly #216 International Order of Rainbow for Girls.

Through these organizations, Lee was honored with many accolades, including the prestigious Hiram Award (Freemasons), the Service Award (Order of the Eastern Star), Knight Commander of the Court of Honor (Scottish Rite Masons), and the Degree of Chevalier (Order of the DeMolay). Lee's life exemplified service to others—he was known for his honesty, fairness, kindness, and commitment to his community.

Lee was also active in the town of Ferndale, his church, and with hospice care. A dedicated volunteer, he cherished his role as a docent at the Ferndale Museum, sharing his love for the town's rich history.

Preceded in death by his father Lawrence Astorino, his mother Patricia (Jellison) Astorino, his brother Michael Astorino, and his husband Robert Schorer, Lee is survived by a few cousins, beloved in-laws, nieces and nephews, and countless friends who were, in every sense, his family.

A celebration of Lee's extraordinary life will be held Sunday, September 29 at 2 p.m. at the Ferndale Veterans Memorial Building in Ferndale, CA. Please join us in celebrating this extraordinary man. In lieu of flowers, please consider donating to the Ferndale Museum in remembrance of Lee.

Lee Earnest Astorino will be truly missed by all who had the honor of knowing him, but his spirit of kindness, love, and unwavering dedication to others will live on forever in our hearts.

ERNEST CLIFTON CLENDENEN

– FOUNDER OF
CLENDENEN CIDER WORKS

Ernest Clifton Clendenen, father of Andrew, grandfather of Clif, and great-grandfather of Drew, was born in Eureka, CA in 1867 shortly after his parents, Andrew and Emeline, arrived from New Brunswick, Canada. It was a long and arduous journey that took them around the stormy Cape Horn. E.C. Clendenen used to say, “I came around the Horn, and I was born in Eureka.”

Ernest, and his wife, May, bought the land that is the orchard today, in 1908 from E.F. Johnston of Oregon. Among the varieties of apple trees on the property dating back to 1869 were Minkler, Smith’s Cider and Stark – that are still producing apples today. “We use all three in the cider at different times,” Clif said. “The old varieties are blended with other varieties for great flavor.”

When E. C. bought the producing apple orchard, he first packed and shipped apples in wooden boxes that were sold on the San Francisco wholesale market. In 1909 this was an overnight horse-and-cart trip to the docks in Eureka from Fortuna! From the Eureka docks the apple boxes were loaded onto a steamship for the voyage to San Francisco. Word was sent back from San Francisco that one of his shipments had spoiled, and that he wouldn’t be paid for his apples. Wanting to see for himself, E.C. boarded the next steamship, and upon his arrival in S.F., found his apples in perfect condition in the unscrupulous dealer’s warehouse. The old dairy barn across the street from the orchard soon had a small cider press, and the Clendenen’s started pressing and selling fresh apple cider.

After struggling with a manual basket-type press for a few years, Ernest purchased the Mount Gilead No. 4-C Hydraulic Cider and Fruit Press in 1916, a room-sized machine that was shipped from Mt. Gilead, Ohio. Powered by an electric motor, it was capable of producing 100 gallons per hour, allowing uninterrupted pressing while the next batch was prepared.

CIDER FACT

During Prohibition, the cider press ran nearly every day during the apple season. Apples from numerous local orchards were harvested and brought to Clendenen Cider Works for processing to supply the demand for a fermentable juice.

ANDREW CLENDENEN

Less than a year after E. C. and May purchased the land, in January of 1909, May gave birth to their son Andrew in the house that is still being used by the family today.

Andy Clendenen rejoined his father in the family business in 1948, after delivering fuel for Shell Oil Company, and serving in the South Pacific during WW II. In 1960 he moved the business across the street and into a new 1,800 square foot building. It was constructed by the Fortuna firm of T & H Construction and cost $3,829, not including plumbing, electrical or painting. The quality of construction and choice of materials has allowed the building to withstand several major earthquakes over the past forty years.

CLIF AND DREW CLENDENEN

Like his father, Andy, Clif took to the business at a young age. Today, Clif and his son Drew are picking apples, pressing, which happens roughly every five days, and welcoming visitors to sample a drink that varies in taste as different varieties become ripe. Clif and Drew blend varieties and each pressing has its own unique taste and texture.

Eureka SYMPHONY

2024-2025 Concert Season

With great anticipation and enthusiasm

we invite you to the 33rd season of the Eureka Symphony. Our musicians have been hard at work preparing programs that are as diverse as they are inspiring.

We will be playing music by well-loved composers like Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven, and introducing fabulous and unusual works by composers like Emilie Mayer, Howard Hanson, Grazyna Bacewicz and Jerod Impichchaachaaha' Tate who have not yet been heard in this corner of the world. There will be a glittering array of soloists, some you may know, others appearing with us for the first time. We will be joined by the marvelous Eureka Symphony Chorus for an uplifting rendition of Händel's Messiah. Gustav Holst's The Planets will be accompanied by projections from NASA that are literally out of this world.

Each performance will be an opportunity to experience the magic of live music and the unique connection it creates among us. We are dedicated to providing an unforgettable experience for you.

Let's celebrate the beauty of music together!
